ASTOR GEMS FOR BRIDE. When Miss Pauline Astor becomes

the wife of Captain Spender Clay she will become the owner of a collection of jeweis worthy of royalty itself. Wil-liam Waldorf Astor, intends to present to his daughter on her wedding day all of the jewels which belonged to her mother, the late Mrs. Astor. Despite statements to the contrary, Mr. Astor's gift of the splendid jewels owned by the late 11rs. Astor is of itself regarded as certain evidence of his satisfaction with the matrimonial choice of Miss Pauline. All of the jewels are being reset by order of Mr. Aslor, so that the mountings will be in the present mode.

The most notable piece in the collec tion is a splendid parure of emeralds, reckoned to be the finest in Europe. It is being mounted according to the latest ideas in gem setting. A Parisian jew-eler has also made on Mr. Astor's order a superb ornament for the neck in the design so much favored this year by the ultra-smart Parisienne. This ornament extends half-way round the neck, the ewels being mounted on a velvet band. There is some curiosity as to whether Mr. Astor's gift of jewels to his daughter will include a collection of black pearls, which is considered the finest of its kind in the world. These pearls were originally the property of the mother of Cream Balm Easy and pleasant to take. When all of these young pleasant to take to consideration it is posed of. The late Mrs. Astor seldom wore the famous black pearls. Captain Spender Clay is unwilling that all of the wedding jewels of his fiance should once. It to pose and gress. Allays Inflament of the wedding jewels of his fiance should once. Equally magnificent is the wealth of jewels which young Bradley-Martin will shower upon Miss Phipps on their wed-ding day. The engagement token which he gave her is a ring designed especially to his order. In the centre is an enormous sapphire set in a circle of fine diamonds. He has also had made a superb collar of diamonds three and a half inches in height at the front, the design being garlands of leaves forming circles, each of which incloses a monster pearl. The collar cost $18,000, and a tiara is being made to match it.

Frederick Haffle, a barber, of Wilthe charge that he had threatened to cause she refused to elope with him.

Haffle began to torce his attentions on the girl two months ago. He called at ISAAC EICHBERG, President. the girl two months ago. He called at the millinery store of her mother and asked for an interview with Teresa. When the girl appeared Haffle cooly informed her that he was madly infatu-ated with her and desired her hand in marriage. Miss Lichtenstein was so surprised at the man's conduct that she called her mother, and Haffle was ejected. He loitered in front of the store and whenever he met the girl he would tell her that he loved her and begged her to elope with him. In order to put an end to the annoyance Miss Lichteustein caused a summons against Haffle to be issued in the Manhattan Avenue Police Court. When the barber was arraigned Magistrate O'Reilly adjourned the hearing until next Friday and warned Haftle to keep away from the girl. Miss Lichtenstein saw nothing more of the harber until last Wednesday, when he began his annoyance again. He met the girl in the street, near her home, and begged her to elope with him. When she informed Haffle that she had no desire to have anything to do with him, he threatened to take her life, it is alleged, and again urged her to consider his proposition to elope. Miss Lichten stein was afraid he might carry out the threat and she made another complaint in court. He was arrested yesterday. He declared that he loved Miss Lichenstein and would die for her. On being arraigned in court he acted as if he were deranged, and after fixing bail at $1,000, Magistrate O'Reilly adjourned the hearing until Friday.
